

Demetris Koutsoyiannis

From: grlonline@agu.org
Sent: 7/7/2006 15:40
To: dk@itia.ntua.gr
Subject: GRL: 2006GL026709 (Long-term persistence and uncertainty on...)

Dear Jay,

Thank you very much for replying our letter. We appreciate your explanation and above all your attitude to allow a resubmission of a revised version. At the same time, we understand your point that there is no guarantee that our revised paper will be accepted. Because we strongly believe that the points we try to make in this paper are worth publishing and simultaneously hoping that a revision, in light of the review comments, can be more convincing, we are thinking to try a resubmission. So, you will hear from us soon.

Thanks again and best wishes,

Demetris and Alberto

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Demetris Koutsoyiannis [mailto:dk@itia.ntua.gr]

> Sent: Friday, July 07, 2006 3:20 PM

> To: 'Demetris Koutsoyiannis'

> Subject: FW: 2006GL026709

>

>

>

>

> From: grlonline@agu.org [mailto:grlonline@agu.org]

> Sent: Thursday, July 06, 2006 4:43 PM

> To: dk@itia.ntua.gr

> Subject: GRL: 2006GL026709

>

> Dear Alberto and Demetris,

>

> I am sorry to have taken so long to reply to your letter. Thanks for your > persistence. The decision regarding your paper was made on the strength of > the strongly negative review and my own opinion of the paper. The fact > that > there was one supportive review did not really impact my decision. I > consider many factors when making a decision, including my knowledge of > the > reviewers' expertise and their track record in producing careful, detailed > reviews.

>

> You are always welcome to resubmit a paper to GRL, in particular after > making important revisions suggested by the first round of reviews.

> However,

> there is no guarantee that the paper will do any better in a second > review.

> It is up to you if you would like to try.

>

